ACS presents disaster preparedness faire Aug. 14

By Valerie Woods
Army Community Service

Army Community Service will present "Shake, Rattle and Roll, Are You Prepared?" a Disaster Preparedness Faire, Aug. 14, 11 a.m.-2 p.m. at the Stilwell Community Center.

Why attend a disaster faire? Better yet, why be prepared in case of a disaster?

Facts:

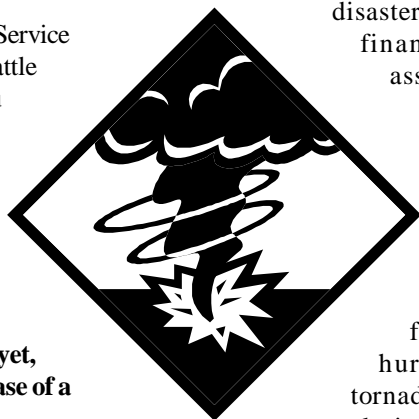

Each year several million Americans are involved in a disaster situation.

Each year several hundred thousand people are affected severely enough by a disaster to require the assistance of the Red Cross or other relief agencies.

Upcoming federal, training holidays

The following dates have been designated federal holidays or training holidays for the Defense Language Institute Foreign Language Center and Presidio of Monterey:

Sept. 3 – Training holiday
Sept. 6 – Labor Day
Oct. 11 – Columbus Day
Nov. 11 – Veteran's Day

Each year scores of communities are damaged badly enough by disasters to need special financial aid and assistance from the government.

Disasters occur every 48 seconds in some part of the world. Disasters happen in the form of floods, hurricanes, fires, tornadoes, earthquakes, explosions, and eruptions. They can be a result of a 37-car pile-up on the freeway or a bomb going off in a federal building. The military lives in every part of the world, and can actually be in the middle of the hurricane, (such as at Homestead Air Force Base, Fla.), flood, (such as at Grand Forks AFB, N.D.), or be asked to assist a community in the recovery from the disaster.

The difference between being part of the problem and part of the solution is most acute in an emergency. Having the knowledge, being prepared, knowing how to react and behave during and after a disaster allows people to be a part of the solution. Being prepared to take the correct actions gives you the edge in helping yourself and others.

Being self-sufficient and knowing what to do in a time of crisis is of utmost importance to you, your family and your community. The disaster faire will have agencies and companies participating who will be sharing and demonstrating information about how best to survive and respond in disaster situations. Among the participants are the American Red Cross, North County Fire Department, Pacific Gas and Electric, Monterey Weather Service, Monterey Emergency Services, the SPCA of Monterey County, Naval Postgraduate School Amateur Ham Radio Club, redshift.com with Y2K information, NPS Fire Department and the Pacific Grove Fire Trailer.

Free flashlights will be given to the first 150 arrivals, one per family. ACS will also raffle off Red Cross First Aid Survival Kits, as well as the grand prize, a Family Disaster Preparedness Container. The Boy Scouts and Company E, 229th Military Intelligence Battalion, will sell food as fund raiser.

For more information on the faire, contact Valerie Woods at 242-7660.

Garrison commander provides feedback from Town Hall meeting

The garrison has several new initiatives that are being planned as a result of Town Hall meetings and other feedback that we have received.

First is a renovation project that is being planned at this time for a portion of Hayes Park Housing. Up to 25 units (approximately 12 buildings) in a contiguous area will be renovated in a community type setting. We are hoping that the work can begin before this year ends. Impact upon residents is the paramount consideration for our planning.

Second is a review of all outstanding housing job/work requests including what money is available to do the work this year, what are the safety considerations, what are other work priorities to consider, and an actual physical survey. The review of the documentation has already begun.

Finally, we will be conducting a survey of the different housing areas to review safety considerations, traffic/speed controls, and location of playgrounds.

Col. Peter Dausen, U.S. Army, Garrison Commander

More information to follow as we proceed on these initiatives.
Thank you for listening!

Do you have a latchkey child?

Presidio police offer crime prevention safety tips

Latchkey children are those who must stay home alone to take care of themselves for some part of the day. An estimated five million to 12 million children between the ages of 5 and 13 are home alone for some part of the day.

If your children are in charge of themselves at home, discuss the routines they are to follow: household chores, care for pets, homework, family policies on visiting friends or having friends visit them, and what to do when the telephone or door bell rings.

If you are not going to be coming home at your regular time, let your child know. Keep in mind that the policy on Presidio of Monterey and Annex, requires that a child must be at least 10 years old to be left home alone. It is recommended that the child has ability to care for themselves, and display sufficient maturity and responsibility.

Teach your children:

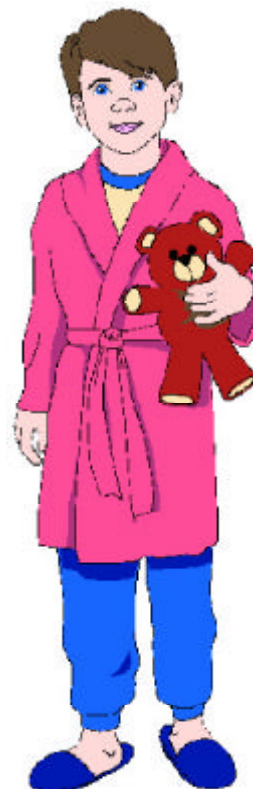

- ☐ To memorize their full names and address, including city and state
- ☐ To memorize their telephone number, including area code
- ☐ To use both push-button and dial telephone to make emergency, local and long distance calls and how to reach the operator

- ☐ To always check with you or a neighbor immediately after arriving home

Never to go into your home if an exterior door is open or window is broken

- ☐ How to work door and window locks and to lock them
- ☐ How to get out of the house quickly in case of a fire
- ☐ Not to go into anyone else's home without your permission
- ☐ Never to go anywhere with another adult unless you make arrangements for this ahead of time. Adopt a family code word to use if you have to ask a third party to pick up your children, so that your children know the person is safe
- ☐ To avoid walking or playing alone
- ☐ That a stranger is someone neither you nor they know well
- ☐ To run to the nearest public place, neighbor or safe house if they think they are being followed
- ☐ To tell you if anyone asks them to keep a secret, offers them gifts or money, or asks to take their picture
- ☐ To always tell you about something that happened while they were away from you that make them feel uncomfortable in any way

If you notice any suspicious activity in your neighborhood, call the Presidio of Monterey Police immediately at 242-7851, 242-7852 or 242-7853. Call 911 in an emergency of immediate danger. (Crime Prevention Tips courtesy of Presidio of Monterey Police Department)

Military abuse prevention, treatment programs combat domestic violence

By Harriet Rice

Army News Service

It starts with raised voices – shouting and yelling. Then comes shoving and slapping. In the worst case scenarios it can escalate to beating, burning, kicking, scalding – or any number of unspeakable violent acts that result in a visit to the hospital emergency room, permanent mutilation or even death.

Domestic violence: it's a subject the media rushes to sensationalize, particularly if it occurs in the military. Reporters attempt to perpetuate a seemingly logical – but unfounded – theory that somehow the training soldiers undergo to fight wars translates to violence in the home.

And despite the fact that comparing civilian sector and military statistics is like comparing apples and oranges, media reports persist in claiming domestic violence in the military is several times higher than it is in the civilian sector.

What the media does not report is the scope and effect of the military's abuse prevention and treatment programs.

"Prevention and treatment are the cornerstones of our Family Advocacy Program," says Brig. Gen. Craig Whelden, commander of the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center, the agency responsible for Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs including Family Advocacy. "The Family Advocacy Program is a commanders' program, and for the program to be a success, commanders need to be involved."

Each installation has a Family Advocacy Program that provides prevention, identification, assessment and treatment services. The FAP is just one of many programs designed to help families cope with a variety of situations. There are links to other Army

Local Family Advocacy Program offers support

The Presidio of Monterey offers a variety of programs to support and strengthen family life skills. These programs include classes, support groups, individualized education sessions, and home visitation in the areas of parenting, stress management, anger management, and communication.

For more information on available services call the Family Advocacy Program Manager at 242-7653 or 242-7660.

Some upcoming workshops include:

1-2-3 Magic! – A two-hour parenting class Aug. 16, 6-8 p.m.

Anger Management – A two-hour workshop offered on Aug. 24, 6-8 p.m.

Mom Time – A support groups for new moms that meets every Wednesday, 10-11 a.m.

Other upcoming workshops are Expectant Parent Workshop in September; For Dads Only: Secrets of Fast Track Fathering, Oct. 15; Secrets of Smart Families, Oct. 16; Fighting For Your Marriage, Oct. 3.

Community Service programs such as financial counseling, family member employment, emergency financial assistance, family member education, family support groups, and relocation assistance.

Support and assistance for victims is a high priority. Since 1994, there has been a financial safety net in place called Transitional Compensation. It's a FAP addition designed to provide monthly income for up to 36 months to victims whose spouses – the primary breadwinner – have been removed from the household as a result of disciplinary or court actions. FAP social workers also assist victims with safety planning, referrals for emergency shelter, legal assistance, and other related issues.

A number of installations offer victim advocacy programs under the FAP; the goal is for all installations to establish such programs. Trained victim advocates are prepared to help spouses both in a preventative mode and after an incident has occurred. Victim advocates know the military system, FAP procedures, and available resources. They provide compassion and understanding when victims need them most.

For the leadership, the Army developed a FAP Prevention Resource Manual and Commanders' and NCOs' Desk Guide. Each commander and first sergeant at division, brigade and battalion levels receives not only the reference materials, but also a one-on-one briefing from the FAP staff.

"It is very important that the division commander get the message regarding domestic violence and that he cooperates in ensuring his commanders participate in the FAP training and the process," said Delores Johnson, the Army's FAP manager at CFSC.

According to AR 608-18, commanders must be trained within 45 days of assuming command. FAP trainers outline the commanders' responsibilities with regard to FAP, teach about the dynamics of abuse, and provide a listing of resources and services available. Some FAP coordinators go to the units or arrange special training sessions. Battalion level commanders then arrange for group training at the company level (captains and first sergeants).

Act directs soldiers be presented U.S. flag upon retirement

By Sgt. 1st Class Connie Dickey
Army News Service

Soldiers will soon get an American flag upon retirement.

Congress authorized the flags in the FY99 Defense Authorization Act and directed service secretaries to present a U.S. flag to service members upon retirement from the military, but it did not allocate funds for payment of the flags.

All soldiers who have retired since Oct. 1, 1998, will be eligible to receive a flag, according to an Army spokesman, since that was the effective date of the Defense Authorization Act.

In October the Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps directed local commands to distribute the flags and pay for the flags from their operating budgets, but the Army took no action. Several weeks ago complaints from many retirees began arriving at the Department of the Army through messages to the sergeant major of the Army and other officials.

Gary Smith, chief of Army Retirement Services, said he has talked with Lt. Gen.

David Ohle, deputy chief of staff for personnel, and a draft policy is in the works now.

"We would like for the transition points to take the responsibility of distributing the flags at local commands," Smith said, but no final decision has been made yet on who will be directed to do that. He said he hopes to have the policy ready for approval by mid-August.

In the meantime, retirees should make it known to retirement services they want a flag.

"The primary message is that family violence is unacceptable," says Johnson. "Commanders are in an excellent position to encourage soldiers and families to seek assistance at the first signs of stress — or distress."

Commanders can direct soldiers to participate in assessment and treatment programs, can ensure soldiers follow safety plans, and should ensure spouses know what their benefits are such as transitional compensation and victim advocacy. The commander also has wide variety of legal options ranging from verbal admonitions to courts martial.

"The regulation [AR 608-18] is pretty comprehensive," notes Johnson. She advises commanders, "Don't get fancy. Follow the guidance provided. Attend the Case Review Committee meetings. Respond to the recommendations of the CRC when they suggest administrative or disciplinary action based on the participation of the soldier in treatment." Depending on the geographic location and the severity of the incident, soldiers are also held accountable in civilian courts of law, and there are consequences. On June 14, a Fort Campbell soldier, Sgt. William Coffin, was sentenced to 32 years in prison for fatally shooting his estranged girlfriend in December 1997. Coffin's case was brought to national attention in a Jan. 17 CBS 60 Minutes segment called "The War at Home."

"Serious cases like this one represent a tiny percentage of all substantiated abuse cases," Whelden is quick to point out. "In the vast majority of cases — about 97 percent — our first option is to treatment and intervention, not punishment. Our success rate is over 85 percent in treating substantiated abusers without recurrence," he says.

Soldiers and families can find help on the Internet. There is a "virtual" Army Community Service center that looks just like a real building. As Johnson describes it, "If you visit each of the floors, you see the programs you might need. This is designed specifically for the end users, for soldiers and their families. Information about all the programs and services available is presented to them and for them," she says. Installation web sites also have information about local ACS and FAP programs and services.

Johnson urges soldiers not to put off reporting or asking for help. "Don't be afraid to report. Don't wait until something happens. If you already see that you're having difficulty negotiating around important issues like child-rearing, finances, or time away from each other, or just difficulty communicating with each other, call the ACS center. Find out what's available," she says.

Classes and seminars are often listed in installation newspapers or as scrolled information on the commanders' access cable channel in quarters and off post.

"You get so locked into your way of doing things, you forget that there may be other ways to resolve a situation rather than resorting to verbal, emotional or physical abuse," says Johnson. "Once you go down that road [of abuse], you get entrenched in that behavior. It becomes a pattern that is very hard to break."

The FAP staff consists of trained social workers who understand the ethics of confidentiality and the need for compassionate understanding.

"We don't come equipped automatically knowing how to be marriage partners or parents. There are no manuals on the subject. What ACS and FAP try to do is help people, teach people the skills they need to get along with each other and create harmony in the family," she said.

Whelden is equally as emphatic in delivering his message. "Army leadership takes this issue very seriously as do commanders in the field. Violence in the home is unacceptable behavior, and we will hold soldiers accountable. For an effective Army, we must do everything we can to nurture and support harmonious, healthy families," he said.

(Editor's Note: The above editorial is part of a three-part series on the Army Family Advocacy Program by the public affairs officer for the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va. EEO office offers mediation option

Mediation is one form of Alternate Dispute Resolution. Since January 1996, the Defense Language Institute Foreign Language Center and Presidio of Monterey Equal Employment Opportunity Office has offered mediation in the resolution of complaints of discrimination. The mediation process is a confidential, fair, non-adversarial procedure that is cost effective, resolves complaints early and improves working relationships.

In mediation, a neutral third party, the mediator, assists the disputants to reach a voluntary settlement of their differences. The parties control the outcome of the mediation. The mediator has no power to impose a settlement but serves as a facilitator to help the parties come to agreement.

Mediation is usually informal, non-adversarial and binding only when the parties reduce the resolution to writing. Should mediation not result in a resolution, the normal processing of the complaint will continue.

For more information on mediation, contact EEO at 242-5105.

Defense Department ready for challenges of Y2K problems

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense William Cohen has declared the Department of Defense ready to face the final challenges of the Year 2000 computer problem.

The Department of Defense has undertaken an enormous effort to ensure Y2K readiness. DOD is responsible for one-third of all mission-critical computer systems in the federal government and one-half of all federal computer systems.

In a press conference at the Pentagon July 22, Cohen noted the department's current progress: more than 92 percent of DOD's 2,107 mission-critical systems are fully Y2K compliant; 94 percent of 4,749 non-mission critical systems are fixed and implemented; and over 99 percent of 637 installations are compliant.

In about 6 percent of cases, systems are not yet "completed," since a known fix has yet to be installed at many locations. Completion of these systems has been affected by operational deployment schedules, such as for carrier battle groups when the fix will be made upon return to home port. Consequently, more than 99 percent of the Department's mission-critical systems will be fixed, tested and installed by the end of September, the remainder by the end of the year.

This progress follows a large-scale effort to handle Y2K as a military readiness issue, not just as a computer programmer function. In particular, a year ago in August 1998, Secretary Cohen reviewed Y2K compliance in the department and found it had gotten off to a slow start. To speed the process, he directed DOD's leadership to treat the Y2K issue as a major threat to military readiness.

The unified military commands were asked to ensure Y2K testing was included in joint warfighting and operational readiness exercises. The services and defense agencies were instructed to fix their systems, certify interfaces and ensure vendors were held responsible for Y2K compliance of products. Finally, officials on the secretary's staff were told to ensure functioning of specific business processes, such as financial transactions, health activities, supply lines and the like.

These initiatives have accelerated Y2K fixes, testing and implementation. In fact, Y2K has led to the largest testing effort in the department's history. Examples range from a massive end-to-end test of logistics supply channels to systems tests within the U.S. European Command while operations were being conducted in Kosovo.

"Last year I told the department's military and civilian leaders that Y2K compliance was a readiness issue that would determine whether we could carry out our most important missions," Cohen said. "The department has made great progress in the past year. All of this progress has been possible through the incredibly hard work and outstanding leadership of DOD's employees throughout the department."

Over the course of the six-year period from FY 1996 through 2001, DOD expects to spend approximately $3.7 billion for Y2K fixes. (Courtesy of American Forces Press Service)

Explanation of classified ad policy

The following information is provided to explain and clarify policy for individuals who would like to publish classified ads in POM-Mart.

Military members, retirees and Department of Defense civilian employees with valid identification cards are authorized to place classified ads in the Community News.

To place an ad in the Community News, complete the form on the back page of the Community News and deliver it to the Public Affairs Office, Building 614, Room 142, Presidio of Monterey, 93944. Ads may also be sent via e-mail to the editor at wright@pom-emh1.army.mil. Individuals should be sure to include all information requested on the form, including the category of the ad.

Daytime work telephone numbers are for use by Community News staff only; they will not be listed in ads. Individuals may place up to three ads in different categories per issue. Each ad should not exceed 35 words; itemized property for sale should be valued at least $10.

The Community News staff will make every effort to publish ads accurately, but we reserve the right to edit ads to meet readability, format and space requirements. Report typographical errors to the editor, and they will be corrected in the next available issue.

Acceptable classified ads include items in the categories of Autos; Motorcycles; Trucks, Vans, Sport, RVs; Wanted; Sports Equipment; Entertainment, Music Items; Computers and Accessories; Lost and Found; Miscellaneous; Pets or Household Items. Items must be for one-time sale or for free – not for a profit-sharing venture of multiple items. The Community News does not take responsibility for items advertised.

Classified ads for businesses, rentals, free information, help for hire or tutoring, or illegal items are not authorized. Each ad will be published in three consecutive issues unless it is renewed or cancelled.

The date the ad was first published is printed in parentheses following each ad. For example, ads dated (07-30) will continue to run through the Aug. 27 issue. Classified ads may be renewed or cancelled by phone; however, new ads, additions or major changes to ads must be done in writing before the Wednesday deadline for the next issue. Deadlines are generally a week and a half prior to the next publication. When calling in reference to an ad, be sure to identify the category, first few words of the ad, phone number as printed and the date following the ad.

Deadline for the Aug. 13 issue is Wednesday; deadline for the Aug. 27 issue is Aug. 18.

Please refer questions concerning this policy to the editor of the Community News at the Public Affairs Office, at 242-5104 or 242-6426.
